THE GRAND PACKED TO THE WALLS

And Capt. Dovener Receives an Ovation--- A Fine Speech by Mr. Watson, of Ohio, and Mr. Hart Talks Briefly. Capt. O'Meagher Condon Present. A Fine Demonstration in Spite of Bad Weather,

The meeting at the Grand Opera House last night was one of the largest and altogether the most enthusiastic of the campaign. The street demonstration which preceded it, in spite of the rain and mud, was creditable. It moved from the west front of the Public Building over the route announced in the INTELLIGENCER, in the rounced in the Intelligences, in the following order:

Chief Marshal W. H. Travis and Staff,
American Cornet Band.
Young Men's Republican Escort Club, 56 men.
Martin's Ferry Club, 50 men, with live coon.
Drum.Corps.
Davis Club, of Benwood.
Ohio County Republican Club, with banner—
"Thomas E. Davis Our Governor. We want No Free Trade in Ours."
Drum Corps.
Fifth and Sixth Ward Republican Club.
John A. Logan Drum Corps.
Colored Club, with fiamoean torches.
Tariff Champions, 80 men.
Drum Corps.
Eighth Ward Club, 28 men.
Carriages and Wagons, Decorated.
All along the line crowds thronged the streets, and the red fire and fire works were brilliant and abundant.
Hefore the parade was half over the Grand Opera House was packed with people upstairs and down, as full as it ever was in its history.
Mr. J. C. Brady called the meeting to order and introduced as chairman of the meeting Hon. Augustus Pollack, with the list of vice presidents printed yesterday.
Mr. Pollack was greeted with enthu-

Mr. Pollack was greeted with enthusiasm by the magnificent audience, and it was renewed at almost every sen-tence, being especially hearty when President Harrison's name was mea-

Mr. Pollack said Congressman Dal-Mr. Pollack said Congressman Dal-zell was not able to be present, but he had pleasure in announcing that a dis-tinguished citizen of Ohio and a fine orator was present and would speak. He paid an eloquent tribute to Ohio and then urged all present to vote for Harrison and protection.

MR. WATSON'S ELOQUENCE

When the Hon. D. K. Watson, exsecretary of state of Ohio, arose, he was welcomed by rousing cheers and ap-plause. He made a graceful allusion to Mr. Dalzell's absence, which, he said, was due to an accident, while his own presence was also due to accident. He thanked the chairman for his high eupresence was also due to accident. He thanked the chairman for his high eulogy upon Ohio, of which, he said, he was proud to be a native and a citizen. That state, he said, never had, and never would cast her electoral vote for anybody but a Republican. He wanted, however, to talk here about West Virginia. He liked West Virginia and he liked her people. In the battle of the ballots so soon to occur West Virginia would occupy a conspicuous position. The people of the country believe West Virginia can and will step out of the ranks of the Solid South and take a place on the side of protection and progress. It ought to be on the side of the Republican party, for that party's policy not only developed material interests, but it developed men as well. He did not propose to make a set speech. It was too late for that. The battle lines were already formed and tightly drawn, and all that remained was to charge the enemy at every voting precinct, and whip them all along the line. [A voice: "We'll do it!" and cheers.]

Of course you'll do it, said Mr. Wat-

Of course you'll do it, said Mr. Watson, and we'il do it over in Ohio, too.
[Renewed cheering.]
The fallacy of the doctrine of a tariff for revenue only was very clearly shown by illustrations. That doctrine carried out would require and sugar and other necessities of life and sugar and other necessities of file not produced in this country. The advantage of protection was also clearly shown. The greater wages paid in this country must be compensated for in some way, or they must be leveled down to the European standard. A few years ago soda ash was on the free list, but the profits were large. A number of men in New York invested $200,000 in a soda ash plant. Then the for-000 in a soda ash plant. Then the for-eign manufacturers put down the price so low that in ninety days the Ameri-can plant made an assignment. We had to pay 100 per cent more wages we had to pay 100 per cent more wages than the European manufacturer, and so could not compete with the reduced prices. Then what? The foreign manufacturers put the price back up to the old standard. A speech by Lord Brougham laying this down as the wise policy for Great Britain was quoted.

The speaker's references to the flag were elements of the speaker's references and provoked alquent in the extreme, and provoked al-most continuous cheering and enthusias-tic responses. Not, he said, until the manufacturer was protected by the farifi did we make in our own land that beautiful starry emblem of freedom. In ninety days after the protective tariff was put on bunting we were making the American flag in America, and it was not long until we only paid 50 per cent as much for it as when it was made in England.

The manner in which the tariff benefits all industries, commerce and agriculture was shown very clearly, and the illustration was again cheered to the

During his speech, Capt. Dovener entered the house. As soon as the crowd caught sight of him a wild cheer arose, and people rose and waved their hands and hats. The demonstration lasted for several minutes, and only ceased when Capt. Dovener, after shaking hands with Mr. Watson, took a seat on the stage.

Quoting prices under the McKinley and under the Democratic tariff, to which time they point as the country's haleyon days, Mr. Watson wittly showed how the people, and especially the farmers, are being "robbed" by the Republican tariff. Article after article was quoted on, which the protection had been increased by the McKinley bill, and which is cheaper to-day than two years ago. The andience responded and cheering.

Mr. Watson closed with an eloquent appeal to West Virginians to lift their state into the Republican column.

There were loud cries for "Dovener," and Chairman Pollack introduced him in a neat little remark predicting his election.

CAPTAIN DOVENER

expressed his thanks for the enthusiasm with which he had been received. He said the chairman was right. There was great probability that he would represent the First district in the next Congress. He had spoken seventy times in this campaign and had ridden fifty miles to-day to simply meet and greet his fellow townsmen in the closing hours of the canyass. He brought good tidings of great joy from every part of the first district. Captain Dovener showed a picture he had obtained in Lewis county, purporting to show "What the Force Bill Means." He made some humorous allusions to this. In the front is a figure labeled "Democratic voter," as if anybody would not know it. In his right hand he holds one bailot and three in the left. [Laughter and applause.]

Captain Doveher scored MacCorkie's campaign and his cry that he wanted to be a "white man's governor." He held out nothing for the future of this state; he promised no relief from taxation. MacCorkle was not a resident of West Virginia long enough to know what she needed, or to know her constitution. He "only came from old Shenandeah county io' yea's afte' de wa." [Laughter,]

The speaker drew an eloquent picture of the old time school, and compared it with the school of to-day. Referring to MacCorkie's prejudiced harrangue abent "niggero domination," he said when MacCorkie woke at the sound of Gabriel's trumpet he would ask, "Is this the white man's judgment day?" and when Gabriel says no, he will respond, "Excuse me; wake me np when the white man's judgment day comes." [Great laughter.]
He referred to the Democratic deputy United States marshals at the polls in 1888, and then lauded the Republican state ticket. He said the calcium light of investigation might be turned on Thomas E. Davis [cheers] and from head to foot he would be found every inch an honest man.
He reviewed Mr. Davis's career briefly and forcibly, his remarks being generously punctuated with applause. He closed with a prediction of success, and asked to be excused from a lengthy speech on account of hoarseness.
When the arplause which followed Capt. Dovener's concluding remarks had subsided, there were calls for Hart and Hervey. Chairman Pollack, however, announced that that The speaker drew an eloquent pic-

Captain Edward O'Meagher Condon, of Washington City, was present, and he introduced him. Captain Condon declined to make a speech, but he spoke briefly, advancing several strong arguments for the Republican cause, and telling a pleasant story or two. He denounced the proposed extradition treaty which the Democratic House passed, allowing Irish political offenders to be sent back, and recalled the fact that Grover Cleveland's administration allowed American citizens to remain in British dungeons because his minister, Phelps, declared them justly punished. The flop of MacVeagh was amusingly referred to, and the insulting words about the Irish written by the treasurer of the National Democratic Committee were quoted.

The speaker went on to say that West Virginia was not in the Gulf states, and we do not intend to allow southern buildoxing to be introduced here. He reviewed the steal of the state from General Goff in 1888, and Goff's name was cheered to the echo. The nominee this year represents the same princithis year represents the same principle. [Cheers.] If you think a wrong was done four years axo, avenge that wrong. ["We will."] He advised volers to go to the polls early, and if the plan was adopted here that has been in McDowell county—if special deputy sheriffs are appointed in place of the special deputy marshals used four years axo, and which they cannot use this year, owing to the force of cirstances—stay at the polls until they are closed and the returns made.

The 'coon is called "Ben Harrison." It was carried in the parade last night by the Martin's Ferry club and will be at the head of the procession in Pittsburgh to-night.

Hon. H. C. Hervey, of Brooke county, was then introduced as "our next state senator." As it was already nearly eleven o'clock he declined to make a speech, but urged all to do their duty next Tuesday.

It was a matter of general comment that it was marvelous the way the big audience sat through so long a meeting. The house was packed till the last word was spoken, and then three rousing cheers for Captain Dovener were given and the audience segmed still unwilling to depart. scemed still unwilling to depart.

The audience responded with frequent witry and approposinterruptions, as "That's what!" "You're right!" When he said a tin dipper formerly sold for a quarter could now be bought for a dime, somebody in the audience shouted, "you can buy it for a nickel."

On the money question Mr. Watson also spoke foreibly and convincingly, referring to the fact that neither Cleveland nor Stevenson had referred to that plank in the Democratic platform.

While the speaker was talking on this subject Mr. C. B. Hart entered and Wheeling yesterday on his way from Indiana to Pittsburgh, where he goes on business connected with the development of the gas region of Indiana. He has just cried a sale at Muncie, at which he sold $150,000 worth of lots. The Intelligence reporter asked Mr. Beckenbaugh what he thought of the political outlook in Indiana.

"I am a Democrat," said Mr. Beckenbaugh, "I am not in politics, and what I saw there is not encouraging to men of my party. I have been all over the gas region in Indiana, and have talked with men of all parties, mostly, of course, business then and men who work in the factories. I see absolutely no hope for Indiana, and I expect it to go Republican by a strong majority. This is also the expectation of the people I have talked with, it was no matter to what party they might belong. There seems to be a general Republican organizing throughout the state. Where I am best acquainted, that is in the gas beit, the Republican sentiment is wonderful."

"How do you account for all of this, Mr. Beckenbaugh? You must know, of course, that what you say, coming from a Democrat, is very interesting at this time."

"Well," replied Mr. Beckenbaugh, of course, that what you say, coming from a Democrat, is very interesting at this time."

"Well," replied Mr. Beckenbaugh, "I state lacts as I saw them. You must understand that there has been a large influx of working people from Pennsylvania and Ohio who believe in protection. These people have been in Indiana long enough to become citizens and voters. In the gas region, I think it is safe to say, that of men of all kinds that I met and talked with, eight out of every ten are Republicans. Then another reason—that region is growing wonderfully. What with glass houses, tin plate works and general manufacturing establishments, I think its growth has not been equalled in this country. In four years Muncle will have more people than Wheeling has You see this makes it a business question. These people think that their prosperity depends on protection. They say if Harrison is elected they know they will continue to have it. If Cleveland is elected they will have to wait eighteen months or two years to find out."

"How is it, Mr. Beckenbaugh, that out."

"How is it, Mr. Beckenbaugh, that you have tin plate works out there?"
THEY MAKE TIN PLATE.

"Tin plate works! I should say so. Haven't you heard about the big tin plate plant at Elwood? I have been plate plant at Elwood? I have been there, saw them hard at work in their immense concern turning out as good tin plate, as is made in the world and lots of it. You see the gas region is just the place to make tin plate. The former manager of these works has raised capital to establish, about thirty miles below Muncle, at Atlanta, the best and most complete fin plate works in the world. He is a Welshman and understands his business. More than this, I know of a large manufacturer in Wales who is now considering aproposition to locate his establishment in Indiana in the gas belt. Although I am a Democrat I am not such a fool as not to believe what I see. Why, I want to say this, that before very long this country will make every pound of tin plate it uses, and it will be equalin quality to the best in the world. I am so much impressed with the opportunity offered in the Indiana gas belt that I have forced the firm of Beckenbaugh, Kitts & Evert, at Muncie, to locate manufacturing establishments there and do a general real estate business."

"What majority do you think Indiana will give Harrison?" there, saw them hard at work in their

"What majority do you think Indiana will give Harrison?"
"That I can not say. The politicians figure on these things. As a business man I can only tell you what I see and what I hear, and I am most impressed by what I see. If Mr. Cleveland cannot be elected without the aid of Indiana, he cannot be elected at all. This is not the way a Democrat would have it, but the way a Democrat would have it, but this is the way I see it."
